

In order for both of the tandem partners to improve their language skills and have a great time with each other, there are a few tips for successful language training:

Common interests

One of the key requirements is that you get along well with your tandem partner. Finally, you should spend as much time as possible with each other and share common topics that you want to talk about.

Language level

It is also important that you are in the respective foreign language on a similar language level. You should have a certain level of language in order for discussions to be possible. The Language Tandem cannot replace professional language schools, so it is difficult to learn a foreign language without any prior knowledge.

Meet regularly

In order to sustainably increase the language level, it is important that you regularly meet each other. How and when will you meet is up to you, tailored to your interests and possibilities. Once a week would be good in order for you to make progress.

Reach agreements

You should arrange at your first meeting, what expectations do you have from the language partner, how should the common meetings be designed, and which conditions you establish for each other.

Mutually motivate each other

Learning languages is time-consuming and challenging. Since both tandem partners are in this situation, it is good to motivate each other and to question each other both about your own language and culture, as well as the foreign language. In this way, both of you will achieve the best results.
